Going Through Ohio
David S. Ingalls' Story
Our Lovely D. A. R.
Financial Fairy Tale

By Arthur Brisbane
THIS IS WRITTEN on the Pennsylvania Broadway Limited, going through Ohio, past Crestline, Mansfield, Wooster, and on through Salem to Pittsburgh, where they say it is a bad sign when you can see the sun at noon, or the moon at night.

Many years ago, at Wooster, this writer thought he would become a great railroad man. But his handwriting left much to be desired, and he was invited to start handling things on a freight office. A cousin, Walter Mullins, had tried newspaper work on the Philadelphia Press, and liked it, so this individual went into Charles A. Dana's New York Sun office, and glad to have done in newspaper offices better than he could probably have done in freight office.

You observe big barns in Ohio, standing beside small farm houses, with elaborate lightning rods on the barns, none on some of the adjoining houses. In the fields there is comfort for Wall Street brokers whose exchange seats have fallen low. Sheep, well shorn, are accompanied by little white spots, each a new born lamb. As the lambs come back to Ohio again each spring, so the two-legged lambs will return to the stock ticker, in due time.

Ohio is to be congratulated on having a man worth while to vote for in the May primaries. David S. Ingalls, Assistant Secretary of the Navy, in charge of aeronautics, is candidate for governor on the Republican ticket, and this is just of his story.

His father told him about Darius Green, who tried to fly, and tell, Young David, not yet 30 years old, believed his father's statement that men would fly some day and decided to try it.

He made wings, jumped from a tall apple tree in Ohio, and he had seen young robins do it, and injured his spine. When the big war came, that injury made it impossible for him to take the job, many soldiers' jobs were made up and down, riding on a horse or looking after a cannon.

But the injured spine did not keep young Mr. Ingalls from sitting down and operating the controls and machine gun of an airplane. He went into the American service, flew well, and fought hard. The only American naval ace in World War, official reports show that he brought down five enemy planes and was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

Mr. Ingalls is a rich young man, but that did not cause him to look for a soft job in the war. He picked out the hardest, most dangerous.

He is picking out a hard, dangerous job in politics, and this writer wishes he could vote for him. Any American that tries to fly before he is 30 years old, and then flies for his country, is well and right in the right kind of American. There are many such in Ohio, and elsewhere they will vote.

Daughters of the American Revolution often surprise you. Recently they said it was a great shame for American boys to be "ruining clothes with the children of immigrants." Those esteemed "Daughters" must be descendants of immigrants or Red Indians.

Now the Daughters ask that all foreign born out of a job be deported, "through a presidential decree of emergency."

The Daughters' ancestors, when they first arrived, were out of a job and it might have been helpful if some of them had been deported. But honest, alien, men and women, now in this country under guarantee of decent treatment, will not be deported unless this has become a dishonest government.

For a fascinating financial story, read the story of Iver Kreuger, Swedish genius of financial ingenuity, who has been "actually received nearly one thousand million dollars." Also "can you sum up the activities of Kreuger in recent years by saying that he transferred from the United States to Europe $500,000,000?"

He sent $600,000,000 to various European countries. "He always carried one million crowns in his pockets," and, very interesting touch, "he had no voice except the company of pretty women and champagne."

The comparatively small loss of Swedish investors, some say $100 million, is in the Lord knows why, talking to other nations about what is going on about the size of their armies.

Washington, April 23 (AP)—Senator Bingham, of Connecticut, said in the Senate today the fact that Al Capone twice has offered to find the kidnapped Lindbergh baby if released from custody lends support to the belief the kidnapping was "done by friends of Capone for 'very' purpose."

The senator said that color also was lent to the belief by "the fact that it has been necessary to turn to gangsters for aid in recovering the child."

Still Shirking Our Duty in Hawaii

BECAUSE Rear-Admiral Yates Stirling, Jr., U. S. N., told the government at Washington the whole truth about the horrible condition of affairs in Honolulu, a member of the Hawaiian Legislature moves to have him relieved as commander of the Thirteenth Naval District and recalled to continental United States.

While the Hawaiian Legislature is considering this impudent proposal, it would be well for the American people to consider the results of the failure of the government at Washington to deal promptly and firmly with the conditions in Hawaii revealed by Admiral Stirling more than three months ago.

THE Hoover Administration, which appears to have neither head, heart nor manhood, shirked its duty in the premises by failing to remove the governor of Hawaii for incompetence.

The Congress feebly followed in the Hoover path and shirked its duty by not bringing impeachment proceedings against all the Federal officials in Hawaii responsible for the breakdown of government there.

Both the Administration and Congress delayed any remedial action until a characteristic Hoover special investigator of the department of justice could go from Washington to Honolulu, make an inquiry, and file a report.

And that is probably the last the public will hear of the matter unless public sentiment compels the Congress to conduct its own investigation by means of impeachment proceedings.

MEANTIME the movement in the Hawaiian

Legislature to call upon President Hoover to relieve Admiral Stirling indicates that the poli-

QUIZ GIRLS IN DEATH OF STUWART

Stewart's Body Is Sought In Rhode Island Waters Near Where Jones Was Found

Two girls were named today in the investigation of the death of Nathaniel E. Jones, Harvard business school student, whose body was found in the Providence river yesterday.

While a search of the river and Narragansett Bay was being made for the body of Floyd Steward, the Harvard student with whom Jones vanished at 6 o'clock in the morning of Jan. 21, it was revealed that a Boston girl and a Providence girl have been questioned by the police.

The Boston girl is Josie Jahn, an attractive blonde student at the exclusive Katherine Gibbs School, to whom Jones paid considerable attention.

Miss Jahn left today for Providence, and at her apartment in the Fenway it was said that Jones returned until Monday.

The other girl is Kay Phillips, student at a Providence school.

HEADED FOR PARTY

Police expressed the belief that when Jones and Stewart left Cambridge in Jones' car they were bound for one of two parties being held over the 30th week-end in or near Providence.

At one of these parties, Jones and Stewart vanished, and the body of Stewart was found in the Providence river yesterday.

RASKOB AND ROCKEFELLER POOL LOST $2,000,000

'MISSING' BEAR RADER TELLS OF BIG DEAL

Each of Five Millionaires Hit for $400,000, Bragg Testifies in Senate Quiz

Washington, April 23.—Operation of a gigantic trading pool in Wall at which Percy A. Rockefeller, John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic National committee, Fred Fisher of Detroit, M. J. ("Mike") Meehan and W. F. Kenney, a close friend of Alfred E. Smith, lost some $400,000 each, was described to the Senate banking committee today by Thomas C. Bragg, a dapper young man who said his business was speculation.

The pool operated in Anaconda Copper, Bragg said.

Bragg said that he, an associate of Bragg, and Bragg himself were also in the pool.

As soon as the testimony was given it was announced that Bragg, Kenney, Fisher and W. F. Kenney would be called at various times in the stock inquiry.

Bragg also revealed that Rockefeller, E. E. Smith, another and himself lost $200,000 in a pool operating in Lima Locomotive Works.

Bragg denied that Owen D. Young was in the pool.

ROCKEFELLER ORGANIZER
In Lima Locomotive stock, Bragg said the pool handled between 600,000 and 700,000 shares of the stock.

"Who organized the syndicate?" "Rockefeller, B. E. Smith and myself."

"Who suggested the syndicate?" "Rockefeller suggested Lima Locomotive."

"Well, who suggested the syndicate?" "Either Smith or myself."

Bragg said the stock was picked from the syndicate was organized. Bragg said he, Rockefeller and Smith had each put $200,000 into the Lima Locomotive pool, losing $200,000 apiece.

"Did you organize any more pools with Mr. Rockefeller?" asked Cullen.

"We were in several with him," "On what?"

"One on Anaconda. That was a large pool."

"How big?"

"At low much?"

"Approximately $110 a share." Bragg said he and Smith put in about a half million dollars each. Rockefeller put in between $200,000 and $300,000.

Senator Cullen took over the examination of Bragg.

"Who were in this pool with you and Smith when you took up Anaconda Copper?"

$9 MILLION POOL
"Then, Mr. M. J. Meehan, John J. Raskob, W. F. Kenney, P. A. Rockefeller and Fred Fisher."

"What did you have in contemplation when you permitted the purchase of all that stock under those conditions, in order to make a profit?" Bragg demanded.

"I was in Florida at the time. I didn't have anything in mind," said Bragg.

"Who did them?" Gray shouted.

"I don't know."

"Do you mean to say you were in a $9,000,000 pool and didn't know what was going to be done?"

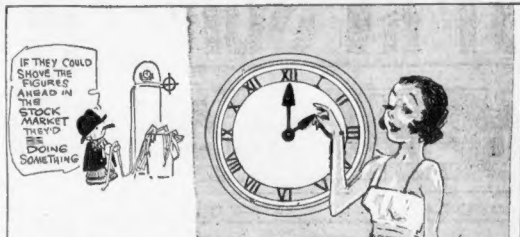

Gray asked Bragg whether the National City Co., security affiliate of the National City Bank, had sold short on Anaconda during the pool operation. This was as much as to say the bank affiliate was helping the pool to unload the stock on innocent people at high prices.

Bragg said he knew nothing about it.

'SILENT BEAR' TO TESTIFY

New York, April 23 (AP).—William Danforth, called by the Senate Finance committee as another leading witness on stock selling, is known in Wall Street as one of the few original 1929 bears.

Danforth, who stands well over six feet and is in his early forties, is typical of the popular idea of a Down East Yankee. He is reserved and seldom talks about his market operations.

Danforth reputedly went short in 1929 before the collapse. Only a few speculators on the short side at that time survived the last wild upward rush of prices. But the harvest that Danforth reaped mounted high, his associates say, for nearly 18 months after the October break, he still clung to the belief that prices were too high.

Danforth's home is in Boston. He has a summer place on Cape Cod, near Hyannis, and spends his winters in a home on Miami Beach, Fla. From which city he departed today by plane for Boston.

tion of the islands do not expect any further action by the Federal government.

Surely some Senator or Representative in Congress will go to the defense of Admiral Stirling and force a debate on the deplorable situation in Hawaii that will bring about two results:

First, the removal from office of Governor Judd, and every other incompetent official.

Second, the placing of the Hawaiian Islands under the supervision and protection of either the War Department or the Navy Department as Floyd Gibbons, who has just returned to this country from Honolulu, wisely recommends.

THE United States acquired Hawaii as a national defense measure. But Hawaii will be a source of weakness instead of strength to the national defense unless its government provides protection to American and Americans.

Bitter experience has proved that the territorial form of government in Hawaii is a failure.

Congress should take to heart the lesson of that experience and place the Hawaiian Islands either under the supervision of the Bureau of Insular Affairs of the War Department or a similar bureau in the Navy Department.

4 SAVED FROM DEATH BY POISONING

Family Found in a Somerville Home, All Unconscious From Ptomaine

A father, mother and two children, found unconscious in their Somerville home today, were saved from death by the timely arrival of a neighbor.

The stricken four, Joseph Simpson, 34; his wife, Edith, 30; Alfred 24, and Margaret, 5, showed symptoms of monoxide poisoning, according to Dr. Charles F. McCaffrey, a neighbor.

Dr. McCaffrey had been notified by another neighbor that Simpson had complained last night of ill health. The Simpson home is at 67 Church st.

Police ambulances took the four to Central Hospital. While awaiting for the ambulances Dr. McCaffrey administered antidotes, which, hospital doctors said, must have saved their lives.

She took off from Kovno at 11:20 a. m., and was last reported at Volyn, inside Soviet territory, at 1:30 p. m.

SCHOOLBOY SHOT AS HE CLUBS POLICEMAN WITH IRON BAR

CAUGHT PRYING WINDOW IN BELMONT

Hunt is on for Youthful Gang
Accused of Many Classroom Burglaries

While one boy recovered today from a police bullet wound, Belmont police sought a "gang" believed to be responsible for a series of schoolhouse burglaries in that town.

The injured youth is Stanley Schultz of Granville rd., Cambridge, identified at Cambridge Hospital as the boy shot through the foot last night after he wielded an iron pipe on the head of Patrolman Clarence Forrest.

He is a student at Rindge Technical School, Cambridge, and lives with his widowed mother.

Forrest, who killed a man a year ago when the man attempted to hold him up in front of his fiancée's home, fired one shot at the youth as he fled from the Payson Park grammar school, Belmont.

BEGS TAXI RIDE

Forrest reported he found the boy crouching a window pane at the school and sustained the blow from the pipe as he ordered him down from the window sill.

An hour later, Schultz hobbled to a taxi stand in Belmont, told one of the drivers that he ran a nail into his foot and asked for a ride to Cambridge.

Patrolman John F. Pease, arrived in civilian clothing, was talking to the driver at the time but hadn't heard of the shooting.

When he reported for duty and learned of the school break, he recalled the youth. A call to the Cambridge address to which he was taken and a subsequent trip to Cambridge Hospital led to the capture.

Doctors at the hospital extracted the bullet but had not reported the incident to police.

OTHER BOYS HUNTED

Police Chief John J. O'Brien recalled a similar break in the Payson school eight months ago and the capture of three boys who gave addresses near that of young Schultz.

This led to today's search for other boys, believed to be implicated in similar break.

A police guard was placed over Schultz at the hospital while the police sought to prevent blood poisoning.

Police said a search of his clothing revealed a glass cutter. Schultz is 15.

As soon as the wound will permit, he will be arraigned in East Cambridge.

DISPUTE OVER '40 AND 8' HEAD MUSEUM ART

Once again after nearly three decades, the Velasquez of Philip IV, somber Hapsburg monarch of Spain from 1621 to 1665, is in dispute at the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, and this time the painting has been ruled not a true Velasquez, but merely a painting of the "school of Velasquez."

Temporarily at least the Philip IV has been debarred from the newly re-named gallery of old masters at the museum.

DARROW SPIKES STATE'S GUNS AT TRIAL

Refusal to Let Alienists Test Honor Slayer Catches Kelley Napping

Honolulu, April 23—Announcing it was ready to proceed with an attempt to prove Lieut. Thomas H. Massie was sane at the time he held the weapon that killed Joseph Kahahawai, the prosecution in the "honor death" trial went into action today after a two-day delay.

Circumvention of the insanity defense was attempted today by Prosecution Kelley under a handicap. Darrow declined to let.

Darrow, chief leader of the defense, refused to permit Kelley's alienists to put the young navy officer under observation.

Montgomery Ward, Darrow's assistant, said:

"I don't contend Massie is insane now, so we fail to see why his examination of him is necessary."

Kelley said he believed Massie was sane, but he hoped, with testimony of alienists, to convince the jury of his belief.

The prosecution said he would ask the jury to find the jurors that the accused quarrel could be convicted of second degree murder, as charged, even though the jury might believe Massie had been mentally deranged when he held the pistol that killed the native.

4 REBUTTAL WITNESSES

Kelley had called upon the California alienists, Dr. Joseph Patton and Dr. Paul Bowers, for testimony to offset that of defense alienists who pronounced Massie insane at the moment Kahahawai allegedly shot before him and admitted at taking his wife.

Four prosecution rebuttal witnesses remain to be called. They are Dr. Robert F. and city and county physician; Patton, Bowers, and Miss Mapana Peters, Kelley's stenographer, who took statements from the defendants.

Haggard and went from the terrific strain she has been under during trial, Mrs. Granville Fortescue may collapse before the case is placed in the hands of the mixed jury, friends feared.

DAUGHTER AT BEDSIDE

Although upset herself, Mrs. Massie, whose attack at the hands of five native hoodlums led to the kidnapping and slaying of Kahahawai, stayed at the bedside to nurse and comfort her mother.

Mrs. Fortescue has been living on her nerves and they are taxed almost to the breaking point," a woman friend confided today.

The mother, tall, slender, with traces of the fragrant experience still etched upon her face, has often appeared to courtroom observers as though in a trance.

Her current picture, she was impassive most of the time, only occasionally giving way to tears when some striking point of the tragedy that befell her daughter was brought out.

Aggravated and worn from the terrific strain she has been under during trial, Mrs. Granville Fortescue may collapse before the case is placed in the hands of the mixed jury, friends feared.

First was a denial of reports from Honolulu that she was to marry William Sorenson, reputedly wealthy society man of that city.

Through her manager, Miss Garbo, it is known that she considers Sorenson anything but a friend, much less a husband-to-be.

Then there was the reported refusal of the actress to sign a renewal of her contract with the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios. Her current picture, she was reported to be her last. Her present agreement with the studio expires in June.

SEEK LETTER SEEK AS BIDOR

Philadelphia, April 23 (AP).—Former Governor Alfred D. Smith, candidate for the Presidential nomination was considered to have gained additional impetus in Pennsylvania today when he received a letter from him appealing for preferential votes in the primary next Tuesday.

The letter sent to Thomas A. Logan, chairman of the Democratic city committee, was regarded by political observers as the most direct bid Smith has made for support.

"I hope the voters in the Pennsylvania primary will express their preference," Smith wrote.

"You call to my attention that I am not available," I recently wrote other friends that I am at a loss to know what is meant by that.

"I am the same as when four years ago I was nominated in the Democratic national convention on the first ballot and secured the largest popular vote ever received by a Democratic candidate for the presidency."

2 MIT GIRLS IN CRASH; 1 DYING

One of two injured girls, alleged to have been abandoned, was dying today in Peter Hill Hospital, as Metropolitan police searched for words off Stoney Brook Parkway in the Blue Hills for two youths who died after an auto crash.

The youths disappeared into the woods after their car hit a tree at the end of a chase many miles through Dedham, West Roxbury and Hyde Park.

Miss Rita Kelley, 19, of Quincy in Dedham, was the driver. She was the windshield, suffering injuries that made her condition critical today in the hospital.

Miss Dorothy Hill, 17, of Madison, in Dedham, escaped with cuts and bruises and was allowed to go for treatment at the same hospital.

The girls said they had not the two youths at a dance that they accepted an offer in her driveway home.

The chase started at Dedham again, when the car was sighted speeding by Metropolitan police.

John Kegan, 19, pursued it through Hyde Park and into the Blue Hills, where the driver failed to take a turn at the road and crashed into a tree, bursting into flames.

Miss Kegan was screaming an alarm and fleeing the girls, the youths escaped.

GIRL QUIZZED ON DEATHS

another party in the vicinity of Providence with some one else.

Jones insisted upon her telling him just where the party was to be as that he might injure her and she refused to tell him anything to the authorities.

Both Miss John and Miss Phillips were questioned by the police. The girl denied seeing him the Sunday he disappeared but admitted having seen him on previous occasions.

Miss John did not see him either. She returned to Boston after following the disappearance of the students, she was questioned as to whether she had attended the Dartmouth winter carnival with Jones and denied doing so. She went to the carnival with another girl.

The police theory in reconstruction of the tragedy is that shortly before five o'clock on the morning of January 21, Jones reached a decision to go to Providence and either join BULBY's party or attempt to find Miss John at the other.

He didn't wish to go alone to Harvard, so, where he was seen at a restaurant, and accused Jones from his bed.

The two young men were of different types and not very close friends but Stewart, an intellectual, quiet but not an obliging one and he was, dressed, accompanied Jones to the garage where the latter car was kept, and the pair started for Providence.

They left Harvard at 4:30, one hour and 14 minutes was ample time for them to have been in Cambridge to the vicinity of where Jones' body was found.

Inspector William Lelland, who began the investigation following the disappearance of the students, would make no comment upon the case today except to say that the hour at which Jones' car had stopped developed a question in his mind that will require further investigation.

There had been many reports from various houses in the city that Jones had been seen after Jan. 31, and one which was given considerable credence at the time, that they took a train for New York.

Stewart lives in the Naragansett bay vicinity report that all persons who disappeared from ships

OLIVE BORDEN BIGAMY MIXUP

New York, April 23.—Prousted by the charges that her husband, Theodore Stewart, is a bigamist, Olive Borden, actress, was in hysterics at a hotel here today.

She was totally unmoved by denials of Mrs. Pearl Spector, Buffalo beauty parlor owner, that Stewart, then using the name of Theodore Spector, had married her 13 years ago and never been divorced.

Mrs. Spector was quoted as saying: "I've waited for 13 years for revenge against my husband and it certainly is sweet."

Miss Borden married Stewart, a Paterson, N. J., stockbroker, in a runaway wedding at Harrison, N. Y., on March 23, 1921.

She separated from him four days later, declaring he had asked her to quit her professional life and that she would not do so. Recently she had been appearing in vaudeville.

MAYOR CURLEY POUNDS HOME REAL ISSUE

People Demand Solution of Unemployment Problem First of All

MAYOR CURLEY is exactly right when he insists that bread and butter is the greatest issue before the American people today. So long as there are eight million men and women out of employment in this great nation, there can be no greater issue.

The mayor has stressed this point continuously, intelligently and courageously all during the primary campaign.

So vital is this issue of work and wages that it far transcends in importance any personalities or parties in this campaign.

Whatever may be the outcome of the primary battle, Mayor Curley has contributed invaluable service to his fellow-citizens in his pounding home, day and night, the need for a new leadership and immediate action looking to the solution of our problem of unemployment.

A solution must and will be found. Mayor Curley by his efforts has helped to make that victory certain.

For, if our government officials, the men in power, do not act on their own volition, it is certain the people will.

The voters in their final selection of the next President will inevitably seek a man who by his honesty and courage demonstrates that he will attack this problem fearlessly, intelligently, and without quibbling. The time is past for side-stepping, quibbling, and attempts to sacrifice the millions of wage earners to the selfish interests of the Morgans, the international bankers, and self-seeking politicians.

THE American workman wants work at a living wage. He does not want a dole. But where there is no work, where there has been such a complete and inexcusable breakdown in the machinery of the government, so complete a lack of leadership in national affairs as to permit actual starvation to threaten millions of families, there is no other alternative than some sort of dole—whatever it may be called.

Millions of people today are, in fact, subsisting on the dole.

The city of Boston is carrying a tremendous burden in caring for the thousands of people who are depending upon it for escape from actual hunger and physical suffering. Boston has been fortunate in being able thus far to dispense charity, to prevent its citizens starving, on a scale that in one year will run into millions of dollars. Other cities have about reached the end of their resources. What may happen this coming winter is not pleasant to consider.

Boston has not yet been reduced to the emergency of near-starvation rations, for the unemployed, as in Syracuse. In that city the officials are proud of having worked out a menu for the unemployed, costing but three cents a meal, or a total of nine cents a day. No meat, and not much of anything else. One egg, to be hard boiled—as Mayor Curley well puts it—so that it may be ground up fine and spread thin on sandwiches, that each member of the family may have a faint taste of it. And this in a great country like America, with its billions of dollars in cash resources and its tremendous harvests!

M. R. CURLEY again is exactly right when he says that an empty stomach knows no party label. The issue of work and wages is not one to be particularly assigned to any party or candidate. Until the men who run the government at Washington, and the men who control the machinery of our political organizations, awake to the realization that the salvation of this country depends upon their finding a solution of the critical problem of unemployment, their appeals for political support from the great masses of American citizens will be met only with deep and lasting resentment.

EFFORTS to bring about the cancellation of the foreign debts and thereby add an increased burden of billions of dollars to the already great load under which the taxpayers of this country are staggering, are resented and will be resented. Attempts to entangle us in the unholy League of Nations, or its back door step-child, the League Court, are decidedly ill-timed and unwelcome. Certainly, until we can assure the people of our own country that they will not starve, that they will have a comfortable place in which to live, and sufficient clothing to cover their backs, we have no business interfering in the problems and squabbles of other peoples across the seas.

The Boston Evening American has pointed out repeatedly that the one quick and sure solution for our most urgent and critical problem—that of feeding and giving work to our millions of unemployed—is a Prosperity bond issue by our national government. A billion dollars a year for a period of five years would in itself lift this country out of the present depression almost overnight. It would put thousands of men to work, giving them the employment they need and the wages they deserve, at a comparatively small cost to the government and of incalculable benefit to the government in the construction of needed public works. Mr. Curley is proving himself a thinking man and patriotic citizen when he emphasizes the need for immediate adoption of this plan.

As conditions are today, this country is wasting hundreds of millions of dollars in what in every effect and purpose is a dole, with no profitable result from it to our country or to our people.

A REPEAL of the pernicious prohibition amendment, with all its attendant crime and racketeering, would give thousands of men employment immediately. An army of men now unemployed and existing miserably on some form of dole, would be put to work overnight at good wages. Their liberty, their pay envelope, their self-respect and their glass of beer would be restored to them at one and the same time.

Legalizing of light wines and beers would balance our national tax budget at once; our national deficit would be wiped out. Loading of new tax burdens on the people, and upon business, would be unnecessary.

Mr. Curley's determined stand on this vital matter is commendable, he has carried the banner for repeal long and courageously.

It is about time some of our smug politicians and the heads of our government who put forth various theories about things, without any real comprehension of the miseries of their fellowmen, are aroused to the fact that bread and butter—useful employment at a living wage—in the final analysis is the one great issue before our people today. If they do not realize it soon, they are very liable to be awakened with a shock that will likely relieve them of more than their smugness.

What the Hearst Papers Advocate No. 13 Modification of Volstead Act to permit light wines and beers under Federal regulation.

Mr. Butler Repents

Ex-Senator William M. Butler, the director of the Republican party in Massachusetts, has at last come out against national prohibition.

The Lord loveth a repentant sinner—even though the affirmation of his sorrow be long delayed.

Senator Butler confesses that he was opposed to national prohibition from the outset. He believes the matter is one for the States, which are closer to the people and more intimate with their needs. He delayed this announcement of his views through two disastrous campaigns of his own solely in the interest of Republican party harmony; because, he says, President Hoover and the then Governor Allen had taken the dry viewpoint.

"Very many people believe prohibition a failure," he now says, "that it can not be enforced, that it breeds crime and contempt for law. Let them express their views."

In short, he declares for a national referendum on the subject, the country to abide by the wishes and the decisive opinion of the majority of its citizens.

Senator Butler's expression is now important for the reason that it shows that the tide has set in heavily against the national menace and national nuisance known as prohibition. It shows further than many national leaders of the Republican party, while they do not take the bull by the horns and emasculate prohibition and give to the country the temperance benefit of beer and wines, have at least decided to resist the public will no longer. A national campaign of doubtful outcome to their party has brought them to that decision.

A Breakfast Goes to Waste

I've eaten many a breakfast; I've had eggs in every style; I've had waiters bring me dishes which I've pondered o'er awhile. I've had fancy ham and bacon, I've had waffles crisp and brown. Swimming deep in maple syrup from some old New England town. I've had many a meal at sunrise on the edge of lake and stream. When they've served a dish, blue liquid which the cook declared was cream.

But the breakfast I'll remember 'til I am a dying man. Was the one they served one morning down in sunny Yucatan. There were eight of us to eat it—and I'm thinking now of them—We were headed for the jungle, and we rose at 4 a. m. Said the guide: "It won't be fancy, but an all-night place I know. Where they'll have your coffee ready, since at 5 o'clock we go." So he led us to the counter on a little, narrow street. Where two Mexicans were busy cooking eggs for us to eat. And I saw them dip their fingers in the stove pan, and I said: "You can have 'em fried or scrambled, but I'll take mine boiled instead."

Now I have a fatter stomach; all the doctor's art and skill. In the presence of strange odors lack the power to keep it still. And I watched those two cooks trying eggs for Kettering and Stone.

Till I suddenly discovered that my appetite had flown. And I said: "I don't want coffee, orange juice, or eggs or toast. On this dark and dewy morning, I'll fresh air I need the most. Though we've headed for the jungle on a three day' tramping trip, I shan't want any breakfast till we're back upon the ship."

War on Parlor Games

NEW YORK, April 23.—Any day now I'm liable to slip on a white robe and sandals and high priest's new coat. This cult will fight to abolish parlor games. Every place else, they've just dug up a new one. Try to write down to pleasant conversation and puff the party goes gayly.

They drag out bridge tables and backgammon boards and talk freer up. Then you must sit around trying to appear utterly enchanted while waiting your turn. Last evening I paired off with a nice number in one of the shadowy alcoves to talk things over. I knew she was simply dying to know how I thought up all the things I wrote and once I'm started on that nothing stops me, but that certain look from my wife. I kept nothing back, dragging in high lights of my early life in India. Not exactly in India, but Ohio is right next to Indiana.

When she asked if I knew Richard Harding Davis I'd chuckle knowingly: "Know Dickie?" After all that's not really fibbing. I talked of the Paris where Villon walked the blue lagoons off Tahiti, putting over a casual remark about the graceful curve of her swan-like neck. Was I hitting it off?

Just as I was getting ready to lionize myself in an African jungle background a crowd had gathered in the doorway and look me over. As much as to say: "The elderly Happiness Boy is giving himself too much of a good time. We'll spike that old dodo."

So they suggested ping-pong. Anybody who would play ping-pong would suck eggs. But I merely laughed in the upper key. Flicked imaginary fluff off my sleeve and cooed: "Of course, if this charming lady prefers." I hoped they would all be seated before the crash.

I fancied her moaning: "Play ping-pong when I can talk to such a brilliant." Yet I wasn't such a bargain. Instead of protesting she clutched my coat lapels and gurgled. "Let's." And off we went in a skip and toddle. She skipping and I toddling.

You'd be surprised at my first few swats. We pinged and ponged too much of a good time. We'll Harry and then I would have to reach for a wide one with a curve. Reaching was never up my street. I'm more of a hands-in-the-lap boy. Always I over-reach and this was no exception. Snap went my galluses in the back. It was no time to get panicky. While they cheered and screamed "Bravo!" I kept on leaping blither and blither for all the world like that proletarian platitude, "Cool as a cucumber." Sometimes I think I'm part Tilden. Playing the game to the end!

My hatred of games dates to the eighth grade when tiddle-de-winks was not stiff in our town. (Copyright, 1931, by the Boston Evening American.)

The Way Out

II. Revise the Tax Bill

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser

The prolonged business depression and far-reaching unemployment constitute a broad challenge to political and business leadership. Instead of decrying the lack of leadership, the Hearst newspapers desire to make such contribution as they can to constructive, forward looking economic leadership. The depression should be attacked simultaneously on all fronts. The emergency calls for the spirit of a field marshal who can co-ordinate and synchronize various remedial campaigns.

DURING the present economic emergency, all new legislation must be judged according as its helps or hinders business recovery and re-employment of the vast hordes of idle men and women.

Nothing that the Senate can do at present to promote better feeling and improved business would have such immediately constructive results as revision of the hodge podge tax bill, which the House has left at its doorstep.

At a time when the economic impasse called for delicate social engineering, the lower House, under the sway of the know-nothing group, struck out with a sledge hammer, and went far toward destroying slowly returning confidence.

Psychologically, the House thus nullified the better sentiment resulting from the reconstruction program, including the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and the Glass-Steagall act which incidentally thus far have been ineffective toward checking the disturbing shrinkage in member bank loans and investments.

THE demagogic "soak the rich" campaign, which unfortunately will hurt the poor far more than the rich, who have avenues of escape, was followed by a further collapse in security prices.

It intensified deflationary influences and helped to prevent normal seasonal improvement in trade and industry.

A sincere, scientific effort to remake the tax bill in accordance with sound economic principles would put the country greatly in debt to the Senate.

Even a return to the compromise taxes, originally suggested by the House Ways and Means Committee, would mark a noteworthy step forward.

The manufacturers' sales tax, long tested out in Canada and in other countries, is especially useful in a period of depression, when taxes based on profits tend to disappear. A THOROUGHGOING SALES TAX WOULD BE A REVENUE YIELDING IMPOST THROUGH ALL STAGES OF THE BUSINESS CYCLE.

IT is relatively a harmless and painless tax.

Evenly distributed over many commodities, it would not disturb the channels of distribution.

It is free of punitive features, which would be disastrous at this time in frightening employers, who otherwise might provide jobs.

The sales tax should be supplemented by an excise tax on light wines and beers, which ought to be legalized.

If the Senate needs evidence that constructive action is required, need it look further than the current statistics of trade and employment?

Bungling, stupidity, unreasoning prejudices—these are cardinal sins these days, when superior wisdom in economic legislation is urgently needed to reverse the business tide.
